Will Continue to Investigate the Case -Ring Scorched With Big Coup

-Mets' Front Line Broken Again. Eugene Hildebrand, America's most famous jockey, who is under contract to Harry Payne Whitney, with Plunger Joe Yeager having second call on his services, was haled before the stewards of the Gravesend meeting yeserday and asked to explain his ride on Mr. Whitney's Hamburg filly Duenna. Hildebrand had a chance to go right on to victory. it seemed, after leaving the post, as the filly had a world of speed and took command of the big field instantly. But after covering a short distance she suddenly stopped and surrendered the leadership to Toots Mook, second choice. At the head of the stretch Toots Mook exploded and Last Cherry, a Sir Dixon filly owned by Catesby Woodford, who carried a fortune in gold, went to the Duenna was still apparently full of unning and was rapidly overhauling Last Cherry in the last sixteenth, when for some reason unknown to the spectators Hilde-brand apparently took hold of the Whitney filly, with the result that Last Cherry won by a head with not much of an effort from Lyne, who had the leg up.

Hildebrand's performance had such a queer look that many keen eyed spectators instantly looked for some action on the part of the stewards, P. J. Dwyer, J. G. Follansbee and Andrew Miller. Hildebrand returned to the scales with one of his stirrups gone, and when he was called before the stewards in their private room he gave this mishap as an excuse. One of the stewards said after "Hildebrand's case is still under consideration and it will be continued to-morrow The stewards did not like the looks of his ride, but they have reached no decision yet. This is the first time that Hildebrand has ever been accused of wrongdoing, and at that, so far, there is no evidence of guilt on his part, although appearances are against him. He rode nearly 300 winners last year, creating a new American record in this respect, and is one of the most popular jockeys on the turf. The fact that he lost a stirrup somewhere between the post and the wire is something in his favor.

That the stewards are watching the racing

where between the post and the wire is something in his favor.

That the stewnrds are watching the racing those days with unusual care can be put down as were was put in the frying particles. The stewn of the property of the from the stewnrds are with the property of the from the stewnrds also have their eyes open for certain young apprentice riders who, according to common report, have been riding public choices of late in anything but a satisfactory wanner. But so far they have not been able to detect the alternate use of heavy shoes and light plates which has been practised with some success by several slick at no time since the present law went into the standard of the stan

Fox, and other big operators. Ike I hompson put down a commission on Ocean Tide, while Charley Heney, Alex Shields, after the race, said that St. Valentine. Shields, after the race, said that St. Valentine would probably have won if Redfern had ridden him, even at a few pounds overweight.

When Phidias won the fifth race the books were scorehed again chiefly by Sim Diemel at'd Tom Costigan, who bet $100 on the colt with every book that would take such a wager, at odds enaging from 20 to 1 down to tens. They won between them all of $30,000, the ring charks said. Wheelook, the Sullivans, and the clubhouse contingent played Phyllis A. while Sol Lichtenstein and the Haymans bet on Leonard Joe Hayman.

Force was another plunge in the last race of the furions in 100 flat. Jesse Lewisohn and the clubhouse commissioners took part in it, but the son of Salvator scon stopped. John Coleman stood to win a five figured wiger on S. S. Brown's Capt. Bob in the race. Many of the handicappers cleared up with Proebus. Julius Bauer's Hyacinth, who ran second, was played down to 60, from 100 to 1. There was a change in the arrangement of the betting ring. Only eighty-two Mets showed up for business, all of them wearing new buttons of conspicuous size on their coat lapels. As there were places for eighty-five books in the front line, Litt, Tebo and Morrison were promoted from the backline, which was taken to mean that while the Mets are still greatly in evidence, they do not rule the betting ring with a rod of fron, as was the boast on Brooklyn Handicap day.

Just before the last race a sneak thief took a roll of $2,000 in cash out of the inside pocket of Sam Dinkelspiel's coat. The latter was acting as cashier for his brother Moe, one of the Mets, and was looking over the sheet to find a wager when the money was taken.

the Mets, and was looking over the sheet to find a wager when the money was taken. The loss was not discovered until there was no chance to catch the thief, so Sam bewalled his fate all the way home.

"It was bad enough to have the book lose $400 on the day; after I had picked all six wisners and didn't play any of them," he said. But to have $2,000 pinched without feeling the fellow's hard is the limit."

S. C. Hildreth, who will train E. E. Smathers's horses here in future, as soon as his reinstatement by the Jockey Club stewards has been officially promulgated, arrived at the track yesterday, having come on from St Louis. In answer to all questions he said that he had nothing to say.

LONG SHOTS GET THE MONEY. Series of Coups Go Through at Gravesend

-Right and True Wins. The attendance at the Gravesend track yes terday, in spite of that fact that there is always a falling off the day following a Brooklyn Handicap and that the new #3 tariff was still in effect, was encouraging from the standpoint of the Brooklyn Jockey Club. There were probably all of 12,000 persons present, 6,000 of whom paid admission to the field at a dollar a head. There were perhaps 1,000 women in the grand stand, with 4,000 men and possibly more giving up $3 each. A thousand deadheads, that is to say the fortunate persons who have free badges for the meeting, made up the rest of the gathering. It was forbidding weather, too, but the unusually big fields created more than ordinary makers again lost thousands on the day as the result of a series of killings that went through successfully. The stake feature was the 'atchogue, for three-year-olds and the control of t upward, about six furlongs. This provided coup with the Sylvester Stable's Right and coy Maid...

As far as quality goes, the field in the handicap at one mile and a sixteenth was of a higher brand than that which ran in the Brooklyn. It was a race filled with well planned tricks, but the best of all proved to be John E. Madden's Adbell, backed down to 12 to 1, who came through in the run home and won in a drive by a length from John F. Schorr's Annius, another good thing, lowered to sevens, with St. Valentine, beaten a head for third money after running up from the ruck in the final quarter. Phidias, whose odds dropped to twelves, was victorious in the fifth event, for two-year-olds, five furlongs. He caught Phyllis A., the favorite, at the middle of the turn, and then breezed home four lengths in front of her. Leonard Joe Hayman, second choice, closed with a rush under the whip and would have nailed the place in another jump.

Out of eighteen starters in the last race, for maiden three-year-olds at about six furlongs, Phæbus, 6 to 1, was much the best, as he came to the wire in a gallop with six lentghs over Hyacinth, a 60 to 1 shot, with Berachs, 20 to 1, third. Salvage, Don Royal and Capt. Bob, the first three choices, respectively, burned up a ton of coin. The track was fast.

THE HAMBURG IN THE LEAD.

SIGHTED 1,357 MILES OUT ON WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Endymion Second, Not Far Behind-Yawi Allsa Seen a Day Earlier 1,061 Miles From Start-Several of Racers Close Together and Contest Nearly Half Over

The German yacht Hamburg is leading n the race across the ocean for the German Emperor's cup and she is being closely pressed by the schooner Endymion, the holder of the record across the Western

A wireless message from the steamship Campania received last night said that the Hamburg was sighted in latitude 42.18, ongitude 44.25, 1,357 miles east of Sandy Hook lightship. The yacht was seen there, according to this despatch, at 11:30 o'clock on the morning of the 24th, Greenwich time. By ship's time, or the actual time she was sighted, this would be 8:32 o'clock in the morning, and the yacht had then sailed 162 hours 15 minutes actual time, and her average to that time was

3.4 nautical miles an hour. The Endymion was seen on the same day by the Celtic at 1:45 P. M., Greenwich time, or 10:45 A. M., ship's time and was in latitude 42, longitude 45.08, and 1,302 miles from the starting line. She had been sailing by actual time then 164 hours 30 minutes and her average speed an hour had been 7.98 nautical miles. This shows that the Endymion was only a few miles astern of the German boat and must have been picking her up, because by previous reports she was far behind. The Ailsa was reported by the Minnehaha

The Ailsa was reported by the Minnehaha on May 23 at 2:34 A. M. in latitude 40, longitude 51. She was then 1,061 miles east of the starting line, and had been sailing by actual time 132 hours 43 seconds. Her average speed to that point was exactly eight nautical miles an hour.

Other reports were received yesterday of the racers which give a good idea of what is going on out in the ocean. There had been considerable mystery about the Hamburg because nothing definite had been heard from her since she was seen by Commodore Benedict's yacht the morning after the start.

modore Benedict's yacht the morning after the start.
She had then weathered the Atlantic and taken a lead of two miles, and as these two boats were evidently sticking together The Sun has all along maintained ithat, while the Atlantic has been reported as doing good work, the Hamburg and probably the Endymon were ahead of that boat. The reports yesterday show that this opinion was a correct one, and that the Atlantic is among the hunch of yachts that is closely pressing rect one, and that the Atlantic is among the bunch of yachts that is closely pressing after the leaders.

Early in the day a report was received from the St. Louis by way of the Carpathia. It said that at 7:50 o'clock on the morning of May 22, Greenwich time, the Hamburg was sighted in latitude 39.59, longitude 52:25. By ship's time this would be 4:20 o'clock in the morning, and she was then 991 miles out from the start. She had been out 110 hours 6 minutes, and had averaged 8.9 nautical miles an hour. Between the times of the two sightings the yacht made 366 miles in 51 hours 40 minutes, actual sailing, a little better than seven nautical miles an hour.

The Ailsa and Endymion were also re-actual sailing, a little better than seven nautical miles an hour.

The Ailsa and Endymion were also reported by the Carpathia. They had both been seen by the St. Louis when in latitude 39.52, longitude 55.24. This was on May 21, at 8:50 P. M. They were then 860 miles out and in the 103 hours 3 minutes that they had been sailing since they were started had averaged 8.3 nautical miles an hour, and they were not very far astern of the Atlantic at that time.

The Carpathia sighted the Endymion in latitude 40.44, longitude 53.13. This was at 11:20 P. M. on the 22d, and the yacht was then 956 miles out. She had been sailing 129 hours 6 minutes and her average speed to that time was 7.4 nautical miles an hour.

On the Carpathia they were somewhat mixed with the signals and said the yacht showed red blue lights followed by one red ball. The captain admitted that the blue might have been white. No yacht has a red blue signal, but the Endymion has a red white signal followed by one red star. Between the two sightings of the Endymion

Between the two sightings of the Endymion she had made 101 miles in 26½ hours. She must have found a soft spot which slowed her down very much.

After being seen by the Carpathia, the Endymion must have done much better. In the forty-seven hours between the two sightings, this allows for the difference in sightings, this allows for the difference in time at the two points, she made 346 miles, averaging 7:3 miles an hour.

The Ailsa, too, which had not been heard of early in the race, is doing some fine work. Between the time she was seen by the Si. Louis on May 21 and when she was seen by the Minnehaha she sailed 201 miles in 29 hours 28 minutes averaging about 7 29 hours 26 minutes, averaging about 7

These yachts are now clear of the ice.

They have held well to the south and had begun to make northing. They will sweep along the great circle that will bring them up to latitude 50, and then on to the finish-Ing line.

The latest report about the Atlantic was made by the Minnehaha. This was a few minutes after midnight on the morning of the 23d and the yacht was seen two miles astern of the Fleur de Lys and 37 miles ahead of the Valhalla. The Valhalla's longitude was given as 53 and she was then 966 miles from the starting line and had not begun to make any northing, being still in latitude 40. This would make the Atlantic to be 1,003 miles out and the Fleur to be 1,003 miles out and the Fleur de Lys 1,005 miles.

These two boats had been sailing 130 hours 19 minutes and they had averaged 7.7 nautical miles an hour. If they maintained that speed until the time that the Hamburg was seen on May 24 they would be about 1.249 miles from the starting line, or more than 100 miles astern of the Hamburg.

The Fleur de Lys was not far enough ahead of the Atlantic to make any material difference in their averages, so that with these three boats the order would be Hamthese three boats the order would be Hamburg, Fleur de Lys, Atlantic. Some doubt has been entertained about the Fleur de Lys because it cannot be understood how such a small, low powered boat could be ahead of the Atlantic, with her big rig, in the weather that the yachts have been having.

the weather that the yachts have been having.

The Atlantic did some fast sailing between longitudes 56 and 60, and when sighted by the Bremen she was 920 miles out and had averaged 9.3 nautical miles an hour. She was then in latitude 41.03, but the sighting by the Minnehaha makes her about fifty-nine miles south of that latitude. It is thought that Capt. Barr had altered the yacht's course to clear the ice, and the the vacht's course to clear the ice, and the change in the course or lightening of the wind made her slow up very much. The distances made by the yachts and the Kaiser's cup. Five minutes later, at the same distance, she sighted Lord Brassey's yacht, Sunbeam, another of the racers. NEW YORK (N. L.), 6; BROOKLYN, 0.

The New York Nationals indulged the Brooklyns for four innings at the Polo Grounds and then jumped in and crushed them. McGraw's silent star, Luther Taylor, threw a meameric spell over the Brooklyns, who were shut out with some neatness and more despatch, more despatch than neatness, for the New Yorks' fielding was solid, with occasional errors on easy chances, Still, for the New Yorks' fielding was solid, with occasional errors on easy chances. Still, the victory was won without being hard pressed. The Brooklyns made two hits off Taylor in the first inning, which was only a spark that sputtered a little and then was snuffed out. Taylor being snuffer in chief. The only saiety made by the Brooklyns after the first inning was a hermit single by Sheckard in the eighth.

Few balls outside of safe hits were driven to the outfield. The first out on an outfield fly was Mcintyre, in the fifth inning. Browne and Mertes each caught one in the ninth. There was a great deal of infield hitting along the ground, and the outfielders for the most part, especially the New York outfielders, led the simple life. Singles by Gessler and Batch and Mertes's fumble of the former's hitput Brooklyn players on second and third in the first inning, with only one out. Owens hit to Dahlen, who threw Gessler out at the plate, and Devlin took care of Lewis. The New Yorks filled up the bases with only one out in the fourth inning, but falled to score. McGann and Mertes walked and Dahlen was hit. Devlin sent a grounder to Mitchell. Bergen made a pretty stop of Mitchell's high throw and had his foot on the plate before McGann, who was forced, could get there. Gilbert struck out.

Game With the New Yorks. The New York Americans lost a ten in ning game in Cleveland yesterday, only one run being scored in the game. The Bostons were beaten in a 1 to 0 contest by the Chiwere peasen in a 1 to 0 contest by the Chicagos. Washington defeated St. Louis and went back to fifth place, and Philadelphia took Detroit's measure. As the first three teams won and the last two lost the race lost some of its compactness. The struggle between the New Yorks and Bostons for seventh place is very exciting. The results:

CLEVELAND, May 26.—A muff by Chase of Stovall's high fiv back of second, a sacrifice and Hess's single gave New York its fifth straight defeat this afternoon. The game was a pitcher's battle between Orth and Hess. Orth showed his true form for the first time this season, and he deserved better than a defeat to his credit, and all due to Williams's injury. In the sixth inning Bradley hit one to left field and slid into second, the heel of his shoe striking Williams on the forehead and putting him out of business for a few minutes. He tried to play the rest of the game, but had to retire, Chase taking his place. The latter made his first mistake in the tenth inning, when after reaching first on his single he was doubled up on Anderson's pop fly to Stovall, Chase racing to second. As Yeager reached first on Bradley's play and Conroy singled right after that, it can be seen how much Chase figured in the visitors' defeat. The score: CLEVELAND, 1: NEW YORK (A. L.), 0.
